Privacy Policy

Usage of Data

The bot may use stored data, as defined below, for different features including but not limited to command handling and moderation purposes.

No usage of data outside of the aforementioned cases will happen and the data is not shared with any 3rd-party site or service.

Stored Information

The bot may store the following information automatically when being invited to a new Discord Server:

- Id of the Discord Server

Additionally, the bot may store the following information automatically when any of its commands are used:

- Id of the Discord Server
- Id of the Discord User
- Id of the last channel, in which the bot was used
- Id of the last message sent using the bot
- Id of the channel, chosen as an option in one of the commands

No other information obtained via Discord's API outside of the above mentioned one will be stored.

Updating Data

The aforementioned data may be updated when using specific commands.

Updating said data will require the input of an end user. No other actions, including commands used by other users on the end user, may update the stored information at any given time.

Temporarily Stored Information

The Bot may keep certain information, such as message content, stored in an internal caching mechanic for a certain amount of time. After this time period, the cached information will be dropped and only be re-added when required. Data may be dropped from cache pre-maturely through actions such as removing the bot from the Server.

Removal of Data

Removal of the data can be requested in the following ways:

- Sending an email to hushbot@yahoo.com
- Joining the bot's support server: https://discord.gg/UtXaF3rM7p
- Contacting the bot creator directly on Discord

If you request removal of data associated with a server, you will need to provide proof of ownership of the server that you wish the data to be removed of. Only the server owner may request removal of data.